Article and photos submitted by the 155 CSSB Maintenance section (unedited)

Spc. Rolando Solis, a hard working, motivated 63B10 Mechanic with the Army Reserves for over 4 years, and his counterpart Pfc. Lakey, of the 155 CSSB (Combat Service Support Battalion), has so far set-up the unparalleled field type maintenance motor pool operations for PAC SURVIVOR.

"We have already completed seven on-site maintenance type support missions to date. Mostly operator level minor repairs such as: tires low, fixing air valve leaks, and troubleshooting inoperable lights for all the units training in the lanes today," said Spc. Solis.

This maintenance section brought all their special tools, equipment, safety eye wash, and hazmat/hazwaste spill kits to better assist our fellow Soldiers while they are conducting valuable warrior skills training. Chief Lissner, maintenance technician for 63rd RRC G-4, spotted and observed the high speed operation and wanted to recognize the hard charging mechanics.
